For instance, when concentrating hard, humans and animals both pucker their lips, and when angry, the eye muscles contract and the teeth are bared. There is, at least, no greater difficulty in believing this than in admitting that, when a female quadruped first bears young, she knows the cry of distress of her offspring, or than in admitting that many animals instinctively recognize and fear their enemies; and of both these statements there can be no reasonable doubt. We are so familiar with the fact of young and old animals displaying their feelings in the same manner, that we hardly perceive how remarkable it is that a young puppy should wag its tail when pleased, depress its ears and uncover its canine teeth when pretending to be savage, just like an old dog; or that a kitten should arch its little back and erect its hair when frightened and angry, like an The Expression of the Emotions in Man and Animals cat.

Helplessness, Patience, Affirmation and Negation, Part 1. He went to great lengths to find correspondents in remote parts of the planet who could tell him which expressions seemed to be universally understood in cultures very different from Europe's. Modern psychology research is still grappling with the problems of an excessive reliance on college undergraduates for their research. The three leading principles which have determined the chief movements of expression--Their inheritance -- On the part which the will and intention have played in the acquirement of various expressions -- The instinctive recognition of expression -- The bearing of our subject on the specific unity of the races of man -- On the successive acquirement of various expressions by the progenitors of man -- The importance of expression -- Conclusion. Animal communication.

They serve as the first means of communication between the mother and her infant. Darwin explained, "He who admits, on general grounds, that the structure and habits of all animals have been gradually evolved, will look at the whole subject of Expression in a new and interesting light. Another blow to the work was its perceived anthropomorphism."
