Flicke asserts, "The attempt upon the life of Heydrich had been planned and directed over [the Czech underground to London] network. Pfaffenhofen: Ludwig Verlag.

In late February civil unrest—including strikes and clashes between communists and the police—erupted in Prague. This would have had the taint of personal motives. He ordered the arrest and execution of thousands of Czechs and sanctioned the destruction of Lidice. Bracher, Karl Dietrich They said they should have been consulted in advance, they never would have permitted so blatant an error. Mattresses were placed against one wall to prevent bullets from ricocheting.
